The Sydney coven is suffering from a man drought – some witches complain, and some witches just get creative.

Grace lives with her cousin Elena and her mother Elvira, and life is pretty damn fine, barring the warlock drought that has the coven's younger witches a bit itchy. Grace isn't worried – even if a suitable warlock were available, he wouldn't be interested in Grace. Ever since she raised her dead cat as a child, Grace's necromancy skills have put everyone around her on edge.

Then her childhood beau, Declan Mallory, returns from overseas. He's a battlemage and hot property. To Grace's dismay, she is but one face among many as the coven witches pull out all the stops to attract the tall, dark and handsome warlock's attention. Fortunately their childhood friendship still holds some sway, and Grace and Declan soon find themselves reconnecting on all sorts of levels. But there are dark secrets in the coven, and Declan's family is determined to shut their relationship down. But Grace has finally found her warlock, and she is not giving him up without a fight: not to the bitch-witches, not to his family, and certainly not to the past.
