The German Shorthaired Pointer loves to make their masters delighted and he definitely loves to work so hard for them particularly if they are rewarded with food, play and praise for a job well done. They are not generally bullheaded and have the ability to master new exercises instantly. The toughest test is to keep them so focused when it comes to training. This breed can get easily uninterested.

With certainty, this breed is regarded as one of the rare hunting breeds which actually possess the ability to perform almost all gundog duties practically. Furthermore, it can be a retriever and a pointer. This dog can chase waterfowl and even upland birds, deer, raccoons and rabbits. This excellent canine companion will surely comply with unwavering dependability.
