San Francisco homicide detective Jane Candiotti's life is finally looking up, thanks to a new promotion and a new husband. But navigating newlywed life takes a backseat when Philip Iverson, a powerful Bay Area philanthropist, is found murdered in a downtown hotel. An hour later, a homeless man is stabbed to death at the docks, a crime most cops would shrug off. But Jane isn't like most cops.

Her gut tells her there's something bigger at play here, something linking the victims in death when it's likely their paths never crossed in life. But uncovering the truth won't be easy: the Powers That Be are demanding that the SFPD focus all their resources on the Iverson case, despite alarming evidence that a serial killer is at work. If Jane can't solve these murders—and fast—she could lose more than just her job...

Gritty and enthralling, this new installment in Clyde Phillips's bestselling Noir Thriller series proves once and for all why Michael Connelly dubbed him as "a master of the page-turner."
